

Mr. Steve Overcash

Steve Overcash currently serves as a Business Development Officer for Georgia United Credit Union. Throughout his nine plus years' experience in the credit union and financial industry, Steve's primary passions have centered around two major areas of focus.

First is sharing information and insights regarding financial literacy and financial wellness that results in enriching the lives of individuals and families within the communities he supports and serves.

Second, and related to the first, is organizing and leading opportunities focused on giving back to, and serving and supporting local communities, schools, and organizations. One example is securing and providing large financial sponsorships in support of major school systems and community events. Other examples include things like overseeing significant makeover and improvement projects for local schools to help improve and enhance the learning environments for students, faculty, and staff.

Prior to his experience in the credit union and financial industry, Steve held various positions of upper-middle management and leadership within the telecommunications industry in the areas of sales, marketing, operations, and finance.

While not at work, he and his wife enjoy hiking, fishing, and relaxing in the mountains of North Georgia and Tennessee.
